done by the Spanish, as is shown by the 126 Philippine charts published at Madrid.

With the idea of getting the information promptly before the public, the coast sur-

DR. ERNEST KING TELLS OF HIS EX-PERIENCES IN HAWAII

When Honolulu Was Under Quarantine and No One Allowed to Land on Other Islands.

Dr. and Mrs. Ernest King have returned to this city after an absence of nearly four years, most of which was spent in the Hawailan Islands. In speaking to a Star reporter today on-the bubonic plague, which is reported to have broken out again in Hawaii, Dr. King said:

"When the plague visited Honolulu two years ago I was located on the Island of Kanai, where it is announced that two cases have died after being sick only twenty-four hours. During the first attack Kanal escaped the plague, but the disease itself could hardly have caused more excitement or led to more privations than did the dread of its coming from Honolulu-a hundred miles by water.

"The island steamers afford abundant communication with Honolulu, but they communication with Honolulu, but they run irregularly to meet the demands of their freight business. The only exception is the steamer which lands the mail at Lihue, Kanai, on Wednesday mornings. One week in December it failed to come and a second and third day passed and no steamer. Finally, one appeared off the port and sent a small boat in to say that Honolulu was in quarantine on account of the plague. The telephone, which there takes the place of a daily paper, soon spread the news, and the greatest excitement prevailed.

"The managers of the sugar plantations,

"The managers of the sugar plantations, with the physicians, met in conference and declared a strict quarantine against Hon-olulu. The plantation quarters were thoroughly inspected and cleaned where necessary, and an abundance of whitewash used. The thousand or two of Japanase then due for work on the plantations were examined on arrival and kept in quarantine for two weeks. A famine was averted by sending to San Francisco for food stuffs, which came by direct steamers.

No Landing Allowed.

"Boats from Honolulu were not allowed to land either passengers or freight. A wad of cotton saturated with formalin was thrown into every mail bag, and these were allowed to pass. The mail had to be hung out on the line to get rid of the disinfectant before it could be read without smarting lungs and eyes. The attorney general came up to attend court, but could not persuade the guard to let him ashore, and had to return to Honolulu. After a time the disease was controlled, and the regulations were less stringent, but it was nearly five nonths before Honolulu was pronounced "I had one scare during the time that gave me several anxious days. One morning I was summoned by telephone to Eleale plantation, where I found the manager and several of the lunas in a state of suppressed excitement. Some eight or ten dead rats had been found in the rear of one of the stables. As the disease had been spread in Honolulu by these rodents it was surely something not to be overlooked. Several of the dead animals were carefully examined, and slides made from lungs, spleen and the larger glands, and examined under the microscope, but nothing found resembling the plague bacillus. The next day the engineer of the same planta-tion had a temperature of 104.5, and several tender, swollen glands in the groin. One Chinaman and one Japanese died on the same day without having been reported as sick, and these cases, together with the thought that something might have been overlooked in the examination of the rats, made it an anxious time. However, it turned out that the Japanese died of beriberi and the Chinaman of tuberculosis. The engineer had typhoid fever, which is an ever-present disease in the islands."

OPERATION PERFORMED. Bullet Removed From the Neck of

an operation at the Emergency Hospital on James Q. Stiff, the third victim of the tragedy at Oak Grove, Va., enacted Tuesday night. The bullet which had been flattened by contact with the bones was taken from near the base of the patient's neck. Several pieces of bone, which had injured the spinal cord, were removed. While the removal of the bullet seemed to give relief to the patient, it was stated today at the hospital that there had been no change in his condition since the operation was performed. The paralysis is as bad as befere, and the doctors held out but little encouragement to the relatives of the young

BASE BALL TOURISTS.

Stories of the first clash between the All-Americans and Beckley's leaguers at Sacramento last Sunday have just reached the east. The cohorts of Eagle Eye were beaten 10 to 3, with Reub Waddell and Jay Hughes as the opposing twirlers. The 'Frisco Bulletin, in its review of the game, derful wing and a runner must be traveling like a runaway horse if the ball is in the third baseman's hands when the runner is five feet from the first base to be safe. He made three safe hits in his four times at bat, one a two-bagger. At third base he made four lightning assists and in the box retired Mercer near first by tagging him. Irwin at short is fast and accurate, and nandled his fine chances in a manner that faded all the work put up by the shorts of the California League; in fact, it was a revelation. His home run over the left field fence would not have counted had the fence been further out, as Hulen would have had plenty of time to get under it. Barrett in center field covers more ground than any one yet seen on this coast, hit ball can go too far afield that he will Carrolls Defeated Alexandria L. I. The Carroll Institute team went down to Alexandria Friday evening and captured an uninteresting game of basket ball from the Light Infantry team of that place by the one-sided score of 22 to 0 before a large gathering. Thompson, for the institute, was in evidence during the entire game, having six of the seven goals to his credit, which brought forth great applause from the spectators. Philipps also made a lucky throw for the goal, as the ball bounced around among the rafters in a very tantalizing way before it lodged in the basket. For the Alexandria team Shurman and Catts showed up in fine form.

Oyster Dredger in Distress. Milton Rochester, colored, eighteen years old, called at the Emergency Hospital yesterday for treatment, and his condition was so bad that he was placed in a ward. Milton went away from his home in Baltimore to work for an oyster dredger. Roumanian Customs. From the Contemporary Review.

Every spring from the mountain villages of Roumania a throng of dancers invades the towns and cities. Their dancing is noisy, as they wear bells on their belts, sleeves and trousers, and shout and stamp their feet on the ground as they dance; but they are unable to explain the meaning of the words they say. Nevertheless, some of our learned men have succeeded in interpreting them, and they have discovered that unconsciously, and by the mere force of tradition, these peasants dance the Pyrrhic dance, so sacred in ancient mythology, in which the Curite warriors are said to have shouted boisterously in order to pre-vent Saturn from hearing the voice of his infant son, Jupiter, the future king of the gods having been hidden by his mother, Rhea, lest Saturn should devour him. The cake that Orpheus threw before Cerberus, when the unfortunate musician went down to hell in search of Eurydice, is still to be to field in search of Eurydice, is still to be seen at every Roumanian funeral; the simple country folk decorate the mixture of corn and sugar with poppies, as, according to Latin mythology, Orpheus mingled the juice of poppies in the cake, that Cerberus might fall asleep and allow him to pass unobserved.

Water Cure for Lunatics. From the Popular Science Monthly. The monks were the physicians during quiet retreat and seclusion for many insane, together with sympathy and protection which could not be found elsewhere, Spiritual agencies were everywhere popularly believed to be most efficacious in the cure of madness, and many and long were the pilgrimages made to the shrines of those saints who were believed to have special influence over the mentally afflicted, and many miraculous cures were said to have been brought about through exorcism and prayer. There were many wells through Europe and the British Isles, each with its particular saint, to which the insane were brought to bathe and to pray. At St. Nim's Pool, in England, it was the custom, to plunge the patients backward into the water and drag them to and frountil their excitement was subdued. If they showed signs of recovering thanks were offered in a neighboring church but it was showed signs of recovering thanks were of-fered in a neighboring church, but if not the treatment was continued until no hope remained. From the seventh century even to the present day lunatics have made pilgrimages to the shrine of St. Dymphna, at Gheel, and here the first colony for the insane originated through a slow process of evolution, and stands today as the best representative of the community or fame
